In my previous article, I talked about some of the facts that have to do with a requirements management plan. In this article, I want to look at some of the facts that you need to know about the scope management plans for projects. Follow me as we will look at that together in this article.

A schedule management plan, one of the subsidiary Plans in the project plan, is an approach to developing, maintaining, and managing the project schedule.

A typical schedule management plan describes...

- The purpose of the plan.
- Approved schedule development tools and techniques such as a particular project management software application.
- The number, types, and purpose of the project schedules are to be developed and maintained.
- How changes to the schedule baseline will be managed?
- Who is responsible for developing and maintaining the project schedules?
- How and when scheduled performance will be reported?

Typical example...

The schedule management plan document contains the schedule management plan for the Arithmetic on a stick project. it clearly describes the project team's approach to developing the schedule and making changes to the project baseline.

The plan names the person responsible for maintaining the project schedule and contains a policy for schedule performance reporting.
